Rohingya Micro-Business Loan Project Bangladesh

Inspire

 $\mathcal{E}$  ven in the last month, 12,000 Rohingya have fled Myanmar into Bangladesh with almost nothing — often with shrapnel or bullet wounds. Those who choose not to register and be placed in the ever-deteriorating camps of > 1,000,000 Rohingya, receive no government or NGO assistance of food or shelter.

It is these unregistered Rohingya whom Operation Abba has now assisted with 106 micro-businesses since starting in late 2020. The women (many of whom are widows and often with young children) mostly opt to receive Singer pedal sewing machines along with cloth and tailoring paraphernalia – costing $249 each. They receive free coaching. Some are more skilled and successful than others.

Tailoring provides these women enjoyment, dignity and most importantly, a modest income which provides food and sustenance for their dependants. Those with enough light inside their tiny thatched homes, sew inside. Others, who have no choice, set up their sewing table outside.

One elderly widow skilfully manages her little vegetable business. Once a desperate beggar herself in Bangladesh, Amina now feeds beggars. Due to overnight theft from the open-air table, Amina has to bring her vegetables home in a rented tricycle each evening. It is not safe for younger women to manage a vegetable store alone. Aside from small vegetable stores — a $245 outlay — men opt to be pedestrian tea vendors, carrying their large thermos, plastic cups etc, involving a $239 outlay. Last year,

Faruk, whose two middle fingers were crippled by soldiers in Myanmar, came up with a new idea of delivering ten x 20-litre plastic containers of drinking water. These are lodged on the pedal tricycle tray — another $249 outlay. This has proved to be a successful business with 18 other men now having taken up the same micro-business. Due to the serious problem of poor drinking water in Teknaf, we have also recently started trialing plastic water barrels catching rain from the roof of six tiny homes.

Knowing that others are desperate and starving as they once were, and who would be blessed to be given a chance in life as they have been, the micro-business recipients are motivated to pay back their loan once they are able.

Helping Parents to Help their Teenagers

T his project was initiated to address the growing number of distressed teenagers in Nigerian communities, a problem largely attributed to inadequate parenting knowledge and skills. Recognising this gap, we acted by organising a series of parenting seminars and three-day camps aimed at providing targeted skilldevelopment for at-risk teenagers. These initiatives were designed to empower both parents and teenagers, improving family dynamics and personal growth.

Our experience has been both rewarding and challenging. The first round of seminars, held in Kwali, a suburban area of Abuja, faced obstacles in securing parental participation. Many who initially registered did not attend, primarily due to a general lack of emphasis on parenting education and the economic pressures that compel individuals to prioritise income-generating activities over developmental programs.

Despite these challenges, we succeeded in engaging ten families, including instructors, in the first session. Foundational knowledge on parenting and adolescent development was shared, and participants reported substantial learning by the end of the session. This reaffirmed our belief that the program is on track to meet its initial goals of enhancing parenting skills and addressing teenage distress.

The second and final session was equally impactful, with five families participating in structured group discussions. The training concluded with an agreement among participants to invite twenty additional couples for the next round of training, scheduled for early 2025. This collaboration reflects our shared commitment to expanding the program's reach and impact. five couples, building on lessons learned from the Kwali training.

Looking ahead, a camp for teenagers is planned for the first quarter of 2025, with skills acquisition programs for the targeted adolescents to follow. These efforts will align with our original objectives while equipping teenagers with practical skills to foster long-term resilience.

In reflection, this project has been a valuable learning experience, aligning with our goals of improving parenting practices and supporting distressed teenagers. We are confident that the progress made will lead to healthier family dynamics and inspire positive change in both parents and their peers. We are optimistic that the

We are actively promoting the second phase of parent training, scheduled for October 19 and November 9, in a more urban area of Abuja. This phase will play a crucial role in meeting our target of engaging twentyteenagers who benefit from this initiative will b e c o m e exemplars of p o s i t i v e change by proving that meaningful transformation is not only possible but achievable.
